In response to CES initiatives to share resources, Naomi Allan [now Hathaway] and I flew to BYU-Hawaii on January 12, 2004, to help with backlog resulting from unfilled positions in the Technical Services Department at BYUH. Naomi cataloged the video collection and I helped to catalog books, most significantly several shelves of backlogged Mormon material. Because of the nature of the smaller university library, I was able to gain experience working at a broader scope of technical services, including serials, acquisitions, and subject selection. Hence the experience was a true "sharing" one. Naomi finished after 4 weeks and returned to Provo. I remained 2 weeks longer, and then returned on February 24, 2004.
